

Christin Lutze: Picture "Icelandic house" (2023)

Influenced by the artist's several stays abroad in Iceland, the Icelandic landscape and natural space is the central theme of artistic exploration in this small painting. The space is transformed into an independent figurative entity and the viewer's gaze is drawn to the unique landscape of Iceland. Wild and romantic at the same time: steep cliffs that drop abruptly into narrow fjords, deep gorges, extensive glaciers with their moraines, black-sand deserts, rumbling volcanoes and an egg-like sky characterize this work. The special handling of light and colors supports depth and illuminates hidden corners. In this small and sensitive work, light and colors create exactly what could not be so in reality.
