

Christin Lutze: Picture "Upwards" (2024)

€1,900.00

In this painting, Christin Lutze transforms the imagined space and landscape into an independent figurative structure. Neither the perspective nor the architectural constructs can exist in this way. She shifts viewing angles, distorts planes, deforms beams or reduces distances. Her special use of light supports flatness and depth, reflects motifs or illuminates hidden corners. Here, light creates exactly what could not be so in reality. A very striking element in this work is the absence of people. Dimensions and proportions thus remain immeasurable. Although what she paints could actually be a human construct, it lacks a protagonist. It is not the human being who creates here, but the imagination. She pushes the viewer into a surreal world: where does the material end, where does our imagination begin?
